ART LEAGUE HAD BUSINESS SESSION

Will Attend the Greek Play at Beloit—Discussed New Book, "Hearts Courageous."

The Art League held the last business session with Mrs. Hiram Murdock yesterday afternoon. An invitation had been extended by Prof. Wright for the ladies to attend a Greek play to be given by the students of the Beloit college for June 5th, also for the 10th the class will go in a body to attend a lecture and be entertained by the professor during the afternoon.

Mrs. Kimberley, delegate, gave a complete report of the first annual District Federation of Women's clubs held at Whitewater, May 22nd. Mrs. Murdock played an inspiring selection on the piano. The afternoon was then devoted to a discussion of the new and prettily written love story by Hallie Erminie Rives, "Hearts Courageous." Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson are conspicuous figures. Miss Mae Smiley read a brief sketch of Miss Rives' life. A southern girl, Mrs. McGowan, tells of Thomas Jefferson, a pleasing description of his young life.

Mrs. Mills of La Fayette, another central figure. The story beginning in the year 1773, and of the struggle leading up to the war of the Revolution, La Fayette aiding the Americans.

PAYNE GETS HIS AX ALL READY

Specifies Where Reductions Shall Be Made in The Salaries.

Washington, D. C., May 30.—An order was issued by Postmaster General Payne today directing that certain irregularities in compensation and designation of employees in a number of post-offices be corrected. This is as a result of the partial completion of the accounts in the division of salaries and allowances, until recently presided over by George W. Beevers, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Beginning with the next fiscal year fourteen assistant postmasters will have their pay reduced to just half the amount of their chief, at the following offices: Calro, Ill.; Clarinda, Ia.; East St. Louis, Ill.; Elmhurst, Fredonia, and Geneva, N. Y.; Freehold, N. J.; Warren, Pa.; Hagerstown, Md.; Portsmouth, N. Y.; Stamford, Conn.; Stevens Point, Wis.; and Ponce and San Juan, Porto Rico.

Thirty-six officials in the postal service hold office under designations not authorized by law in the following offices, New Orleans, New York, Washington, Chester, Pa., Los Angeles, Louisville, Nashville, Newburg and Utica, N. Y., and Chicago.

Violations of the law which fix the maximum salaries of clerks in second class postoffices at $1,000 a year, except in the case of assistant postmasters, have been discovered at Leadville, Col.; New Brighton, N. Y.; Tarrytown, N. Y., and San Juan, Porto Rico.

Eight postoffices at which in all thirteen clerks receive more than the salaries to which their designated position as "assistants superintendents" entitle them, have been declared. The order of readjustment affects two positions in Louisville, two in New York city, one each in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, and Detroit, four in St. Louis and two in Boston.

DEMANDS FACTS FROM MISS ELLEN M. STONE

Peremptory Call by State Department for Information Regarding Her Claim Upon Turkey.

Washington, May 30.—Ellen M. Stone, the missionary whose capture by brigands in Turkey caused a sensation, has been requested by the state department to furnish information upon which the department can prepare a claim against Turkey. The demand upon Miss Stone is admitted to be peremptory. Thus far she has neglected to supply the facts desired and the department is indisposed to proceed further with the case.

Correspondence between Miss Stone and the department has been unsatisfactory, as the department has been unable to obtain from her anything tangible upon which to base a claim for damages. The missionary has written a letter of excessive length in which she tells the story of her capture, but not one of her statements is substantiated by affidavits or other proofs upon which action could be taken.

The affair has a number of singular features. It is known, for example, that Miss Stone was in full sympathy with the Macedonian committee, which eventually received the $70,000 that was paid for her ransom, and that the money was used to purchase arms and ammunition with which to fight the Turks.

Rifles and Cannon for Sale. The Italian government has for sale 600,000 rifles made in 1887, together with 1,370 obsolete cannon.

SAYS CLEVELAND WOULD DO IT

Bourke Cochran Favors the Stuffed Prophets Chances of Election.

Berlin, May 30.—Bourke Cochran was interviewed today on his arrival here from Egypt. He predicts that if Grover Cleveland is nominated for the presidency he will be elected. Mr. Cochran points out that Mr. Cleveland has already received an expression of popular confidence almost unique in American history, and also that if Mr. Cleveland is given the nomination it will be because of an impressive demand from the people themselves, in spite of the intense internal opposition from the democratic party. These two considerations, he believes, make it clear that Mr. Cleveland would be assured of success.

MODERN PRODIGAL SUNDAY EVENING

Rev. Francis Strough Will Speak at the Congregational Church at That Time.

In the Congregational church on Sunday night Rev. Francis A. Strough will speak on the modern prodigal. This is an illustrated lecture, with photographs from life, picturing the boy as he leaves his home for some city, as hundreds of boys are doing today, and the temptations and pitfalls which confront him, then the two paths, the one to a successful business life, the other to an evil life and the awful results of sin.

The lecture has been given several hundred times in the different cities of the United States. The pictures are beautifully colored and there are one hundred of them. Mr. Strough has worked in connection with the Y. M. C. A.'s all over the country and his efforts have been very successful. In one service for men only in Rochester, N. Y., there were present 1,250 men. The secretary of that association, F. L. Starratt, says "Mr. Strough and his magnificent stereoscopic pictures pack our auditorium every time." He has been with this association six different times and will return in October for a series of meetings lasting nine days.

FAMILY FEUD CAUSES COURTROOM TRAGEDY

Woman Is Shot to Death While Trying to Prevent Husband From Engaging in Combat.

Mattoon, Ill., May 30.—Mrs. Jacob Berry was fatally shot by James M. Rawlins in the courtroom of Police Magistrate Scott and a panic ensued in the courtroom. The tragedy was the outcome of a family feud.

Mrs. Berry and Mrs. Rawlins quarreled in the street and indulged in a fist fight, and while they were quarreling Mrs. Berry's daughter came to her rescue with a club and seriously hurt Mrs. Rawlins, who immediately thereafter swore out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Berry and her daughter. Mrs. Berry fled a counter charge.

The cases came up before Justice Scott and the husbands of both women were present. The magistrate ordered that the case be continued and all started to leave the courtroom. As they did so Rawlins made an insulting remark to Berry, who started toward him with clenched fists. Seeing this, Rawlins drew a revolver and Mrs. Berry, fearing for her husband, ran forward to pull him away. She was clinging to his shoulder when Rawlins fired three shots at her, one of the bullets causing a fatal wound.

MINERS' STRIKE IS TALKED OF Men Say Commission's Award Is Repudiated, and Promises Not Kept as Agreed.

THEY ARE IGNORED

District Presidents Are Not Considered by the Owners as They Were Promised.

(Special By Scripps-McLain) Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 30.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers has been appraised of the danger of another strike among the anthracite coal mines being a possibility of the near future.

Are Very Angry. The miners claim that all their rights won for them in the recent strike are not really gains but are held up by the board to suit their will. They may demand another strike within a short time.

Several months after plaintiff had stopped work he met the defendant and asked for his pay for the time he had worked, and the defendant agreed to pay him, but later changed his mind. PROTECTS DAUGHTER FROM ANGRY HUSBAND

Aged Man Inflicts Fatal Wound on Son-in-Law While Latter Chokes His Wife.

Springfield, Ill., May 30.—Word comes from Carlinville that William H. Ebel, 22 years old, was fatally wounded at his home in Bunker Hill by his father-in-law, Morgan Hudson, 70 years old. Ebel is still alive, but no hopes are entertained for his recovery. Two shots were fired by Hudson, the first bullet going wild and the second taking effect in the victim's left breast below the heart.

The cause of the shooting is not known. The theory advanced is that the young man arrived home for dinner and finding the meal late began choking his wife. The older man interfered and fired upon his son-in-law.

The three people lived in the same house and it is said by some residents of the neighborhood that family trouble had existed for some time.

PRESIDENT IS WITH MORMONS

Talks to Followers of Joseph Smith in Salt Lake City.

(Special by Scripps-McLain.)

Ogden, Utah, May 30.—Next to President Roosevelt, the man most in the public eye was Apostle Reed Smoot of the Mormon church who wears the toga of a United States senator. Mr. Smoot was in evidence everywhere. He was on the stand with the president in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City, and after the functions there were over he was hurried down to Ogden, where he again mounted the rostrum, this time to introduce the president to the people of the town. He occupied a chair next to that of the president and whenever he spoke of the chief magistrate, or was spoken to by him, he placed his arm around the president's shoulder in a most affectionate and caressing manner.

Much Curiosity. There was considerable curiosity expressed by various people before the president came as to how two men would meet. If Mr. Smoot felt any resentment toward the president for the latter's avowed renunciation for polygamy last winter during the senatorial fight, he certainly did not show it and the president treated him just as he would any other distinguished citizen assigned to the duty of making him welcome.

Big Reception. The president was given a splendid reception at Salt Lake City and at Ogden. He spoke in the great Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake City devoting much of the speech to the subject of irrigation and the proper use of the soil.

Secretary of the Navy Moody made a great hit with the crowd in a speech following that of the president, in which he promised to name a battleship after Utah if five were provided for by the next congress.

MISS ROOSEVELT IS IN PERIL

Hemmed In by Fire Engines When Out First Time as Chauffeur.

Washington, May 30.—Miss Alice Roosevelt made her debut as chauffeur of a new $2,500 automobile she purchased recently and showed great skill in its management. She was given an opportunity to test her presence of mind, for while proceeding down Pennsylvania avenue she was overtaken by a number of fire engines and hook and ladder companies on their way to a fire. Miss Roosevelt stopped the machine and let the engines rush past her, thereby saving herself from the accident which must have ensued had she swerved aside to let them pass by.

BOY SURPRISES PHYSICIANS

Sits Up in Bed When They Discuss Severe Operation.

New York, May 30.—While members of his family were hurrying to what they supposed to be his deathbed and physicians were discussing the remote chance of saving his life by a severe operation, John Pattison, 16 years old, who had been in a state of profound coma for two days, suddenly sat bolt upright and yawned. "Geo, but I had a good time," said the youth to the amazed doctors. "But I got an awful head. A little bromo seltzer'll straighten me up, though." With that the boy jumped out of his cot and called for his clothes.

ENGLAND HAS A BAD SHOCK

The Proposition for Tariff Creates a Big Sensation Among Members of Parliament.

TARIFF WAR IS ON

The Public and Press Are Not Unanimous in the Agreement with Chamberlain.

(Special By Scripps-McLain) London, May 30.—The greatest sensation that Great Britain has known since the declaration of the South African war is sweeping over the country. It is Secretary Chamberlain's proposal to begin a commercial war upon the United States. This is in retaliation of the oft-exploited "American Invasion of England."

The project which has been publicly endorsed by Premier Balfour, provides that a tax shall be paid on every bit of food eaten in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. This will inflict suffering on the poor, but the government has apparently disregarded this fact in its plan to lower the commercial supremacy of the United States.

Loss to the United States. Forty per cent of the total American exports at present go to England, while only 6 per cent of the British exports go to America. An idea of what the carrying out of the project would mean financially to the United States may be gathered from the fact that the British grain tax of only a shilling a hundred-weight costs American wheat and flour exporters $15,000,000 a year.

Chamberlain's idea means a commercial war with America for the benefit of the Canadian wheat grower, with a resulting depression to the American farming and milling industries. The jealousy which the American industrial invasion of England has aroused is likely to stimulate public support of Chamberlain's scheme.

Provincial Papers Oppose Plan. The Telegraph and other papers print figures and facts for the purpose of inviting a commercial campaign against America. The provincial papers, especially those of Manchester, oppose the project and predict that Chamberlain will end his great career in a colossal failure. The question is exciting the public more than anything has since the South African war.

TAPS ENCIRCLE ALL THIS WIDE WORLD THIS DAY

NEW SPIRIT OF MEMORIAL DAY HAS ARRIVED.

NATION MOURNS ITS DEAD

Khadi-Clad Buglers Will Sound the Praises of Fallen Heroes the World Over.

322222CCCC C C C C C C C C C C
Hours before daylight reached the eastern limit of the United States this morning, a solitary Khadi-clad soldier standing over a few graves in the little island of Guam started the saddest call that issues from the bugles mouth. The call that has sounded over many little mounds of the countries' best and bravest in recent years. The call that has started many a hoary veteran and bearded youth on his long journey to the hereafter. The call that marks the end of all things earthly to the American soldier—taps.

Around the Globe
On fifteen hundred miles to the west, while the smoke of rifles from many firing squads rises towards the heavens, will be heard from many sounding bugles heard by lusty soldier boys. The little tropically decked mounds of the nations dead will be surrounded by squads of bronzed men, who stand with bowed heads paying tribute to their dead comrades.

In China
Then as the heart rending sounds die away they will be taken up in the Imperial city of China, and the narrow graves of the defenders of their country's honor will receive honor justly due them. In Paris, London, and thence across the wide Atlantic the sound has vibrated on its way to Cuba and Porto Rico. Instead of the lone bugle hundreds are waiting to take up the call.

In America
From east to west, the call goes through our country. As the sun spirit of the old man of today and they bow their heads with reverence as they stand and hear the last tribute to the dead coming from the mouths of the bugles.

May it Ever Live
May the spirit ever live. May the busy world stop once a year. In its turning and listen to the lesson which it taught on this, the day of days, to the rising generation of soldiers of future ages. It is a day that the lesson of patriotism can be taught a day in which the youth can learn to realize the love of country, the love of flag, that lead these men to give up their lives that the honor of the nation might remain and that the flag might be unsullied by defeat.

ROCK COUNTY SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' MONUMENT

sets, on the Atlantic, the slopes of the Pacific will echo the call, the last toll over the grave of the dead soldier. Hawaii, and even far off Samoa will give an answering note as some lone grave is decorated by loving hands.

Decoration Day has a new spirit, a new significance. To the rising generation, as well as to the departing it means more than it did ten years ago. It is the day of a nation mourning more in the fashion of a first memorial day. Hundreds of thousands of old gray haired men, with tottering footsteps will pause beside the grave of a departed comrade and to them the day has special significance. Beside them will stand men who fought in Cuba stormed the Spanish strongholds in Porto Rico, who languished in the concentration camps of the South, who crept along through the rice paddies of Guam, or charged through the cane brake of the Philippines. Men who have sealed the wall of the English embassy at Peking, and have planted the flag in places from which it shall never come down. To these men also the day has special significance. To them it brings back the hour of battle, the hours of stifling life in camps and hospitals and the memory of some comrade who has gone to his final resting place in the life beyond.

Soldier Service
A soldier can never forget his days of service. He cannot be enlisted a month without having heard the bugle sound over the grave of some departed comrade. A silent benediction for the soul of the departed. It is never associated with the sound that put him to sleep so many nights. It is the sound that was heard as they lowered his dead associate into his narrow grave.

New Spirit
To these men the day is more solemn than before. They appreciate the spirit of the veterans, the

EDMUND TICE IN WAR OF 1812

Is Buried in the Janesville Cemetery—Fought in the New Jersey Regiment.

After publishing the list of veterans of the war of 1812, Thursday evening it was found that the name of Edmund Tice has been overlooked. Mr. Tice is a veteran of that war in which we for the second time humbled the pride of Old England and taught the world a lesson that even if we were a baby nation we were strong enough to whip the strongest power of Europe on both land and sea. Mr. Tice enlisted with a New Jersey regiment and saw service throughout the whole war. He came west in 1852 and settled in Janesville. He died in 1861, and was buried on a lot that is about two blocks east of the Grand army lot. Mrs. John Kay is his grand daughter. Mr. Tice's father was in the Continental army, serving in a New Jersey regiment under Washington.

An Animal Story For Little Folks THE Trapper's Bad Bargain

The polar bears heard that there was a party of trappers near their home, and they decided to go down and meet them and see if they could not make a bargain for the exchange of some furs for little household articles.

The bears gathered all the skins and furs they had and marched down to meet the trapper. There they met a man who had several big chests filled with trinkets that he desired to give in exchange.

"YOU FELLOWS WANT TOO MUCH FOR YOUR FURS," SAID THE MAN.

"What will you give me for this fur?" asked the first bear, holding up a beautiful otter skin that would have made a handsome collar for some pretty lady.

"Three glass beads," answered the man.

"Oh, no," replied the bear. "That is too cheap. You ought to give a quart of beads."

"What will you give for this?" asked the second bear, holding up a valuable fur.

"A fine comb," answered the man.

"That's too cheap," replied the bear. "You ought to give a comb and brush."

"What will you give for this?" asked the third bear, holding up a pretty skin.

"A box of toothpicks," answered the man.

"That's too cheap," replied the bear. "You ought to give the toothpicks and a toothbrush."

"You fellows want too much for your furs," said the man. "You had better talk this matter over between you and see if you will not accept my offers."

Then the bears put their heads together and had a little talk.

"Well, what have you decided?" asked the man.

"We have decided," said the bears, "that you are altogether too cheap to live, and we are going to eat you and then take all these pretty things for ourselves."

The bears made a rush at the man and the man made a dash at top speed across the snow.

Then the bears seized the chests and divided the nice things between them and took them home to make their wives and children Christmas gifts of them.

Moral.—Don't always try to get the best of the bargain.—Chicago Tribune.

Elephant Work in Burmah

The Great Beast Sometimes Labors Without Immediate Oversight.

America presents varied scenes and contrasting methods in its lumbering industries, says a writer in Forestry and Irrigation, and, while modern invention makes use of the endless cables and improved log tramways, there can be found in identical camps with these the most primitive power of skids and steers. Even more than most persons realize, the use of these slow animals is still adhered to, and the yoke of oxen is in requisition from the Maine woods to the redwood forests of California. The sole use of an ox in a lumber camp, however, is that of the draft animal.

In Burmah the animal generally used in lumber operations is the elephant. While "my lord the elephant" solves in a unique way the transportation problem—always a vexatious one in lumbering operations—he does more than that. The stolid and slow moving ox can haul a load from one place to another, but the load has to be made ready for him in the first place, and after it has arrived at its destination it has to be unloaded. The elephant takes care of all these operations. Not only is he a draft animal, but in some instances, at a word from his driver, he picks up a timber, carries it to the designated point, and then not only deposits it where it belongs, but does so with precision and comparative ease, accomplishing a result almost impossible to hand labor, and with less expenditure of time than would be required by a steam crane.

In most cases an elephant driver or mahout is required for each elephant, but human labor is so cheap as not to be a factor in the expense. The elephant furnishes the labor which is paid for, and the driver is looked upon as a necessary, though not altogether desirable, concomitant, as the native helper is not so much to be relied upon as his charge. Opium and the strong brews of native roots work on human frailty, but the elephant has no desire for these. In many big lumbering operations the elephants are seemingly "told" what they are to do in the morning, and left in some degree to carry on the work during the day according to their own devices. Very remarkable able are the stories told of their sagacity. One of these stories, vouched for as true, concerns lumbering, and tells of an elephant that was about to pick up a log just as the great gong which signaled the close of the day's work was sounded. To the surprise of the mahout, the log, only a little larger than others which had been carried, proved too heavy for the elephant to lift from the ground. Another elephant was requisitioned, but the two together failed to make any headway with the heavy timber, and the attempt was given up. In the morning, the first elephant went immediately to the timber, lifted it with apparent ease, and carried it to the required resting place.

The lumber handled by these beasts, however, is exceedingly heavy. Most of it is teak, familiar to Americans in the form of black, quaintly carved furniture, of a weight and hardness which suggest ebony. Much of it when handled by the elephants, is thoroughly water-soaked. In Rudyard Kipling's poem, "Mandala," which exploits some of the charms of Upper Burmah, he speaks of "Elephants a-pillin' teak;

In the sludgy, squidgy creek."

In a story, "Mott-Gui," he tells of an elephant of that name, how it was ordered to work for a period of several days, during which time the mahout was to be away. Before leaving the driver tapped the big elephant's foot a number of times, agreeing with the specified number of days which the beast was to work while he was gone. True to these instructions, Mott-Gui worked peacefully and with ardor until the set time was up. At the expiration of the driver's leave the elephant refused to work and threats, force and enticement were unavailing to compel him to keep at his task until the recalcitrant mahout should return. When mahout and elephant were at last reunited, however, all trace of stubbornness and bad temper disappeared from Mott-Gui and he resumed his task with an evident willingness. There are many other passages where Kipling renders tribute to the sagacity of the elephant, for whose intelligence the novelist has respect.

ARTICULTURE

The Asparagus Bed.

In most of the Northern states, spring is the best time to start an asparagus bed. The work should be begun as soon as the soil is dry enough. The advantage of beginning early is to get the asparagus roots into the soil in time to receive the benefit of the spring rains. The bed may indeed be put in late, say June or July, but in that case the roots will be trying to send up shoots at a time of year when there is the least supply of moisture. Artificial watering is often resorted to in such cases, but such application of water is often neglected or made too scantily, and the supply that nature gives is thus much to be preferred. Moreover, in the case of a large bed on sandy soil, the application of water would be found to entail an immense amount of labor.

For asparagus the ground should be thoroughly worked. If the land has a decided slope, run the asparagus rows in accordance with it, so that the soil may to some extent have a natural drainage. It is best to give the plants room enough, and if they are from four to five feet apart, it will be better for them and make it easier to cultivate with a horse. If the bed be of sufficient size to require it, asparagus roots spread rapidly and soon cover a large area. They will produce larger shoots and will continue to produce longer than will be the case if the roots are planted close together, as used to be done. In too close plantings, the beds in a few years become a mass of roots, and the stalks become smaller and tougher from year to year.

When a large field is to be planted to asparagus it is interesting to know how many plants will be required. If they are set three feet apart each way an acre will require 4,840; three by four feet, 3,640; four by four feet, 2,722 plants; four by five feet, 2,178 plants per acre; five by five feet, 1,692; five by six feet, 1,452; six by six feet, 1,210. The roots of asparagus will sometimes be found in the soil ten feet from the parent stem, so it is readily seen that they can use all the room given them. Asparagus is not a deep-rooted plant and does not require to be planted in deep trenches, as some seem to think. In its wild state it grows on the edges of marshes and has to send its roots down only a few inches to reach water. The roots cannot live in water and hence run far over the ground near the surface. When they are planted in deep trenches on heavy soil the roots lie in water for weeks at a time and the plants die. The writer knows of such a bed being made in the spring of 1902. It was on heavy, wet soil. The old man that dug the trench followed the old notion and put it down "good and deep," which meant over two feet. He filled the bottom with tomato cans and the like rubbish, piled a lot of manure on top of that, then put in the asparagus roots and the dirt. A good rain came on and filled the trench. Not an asparagus shoot appeared during the entire season. The proper depth to plant asparagus is from four to ten inches, depending on conditions of soil, moisture supply and variety of plant.

Theory as to Crime's Increase.

A remarkable theory in regard to the increase in crime is advanced by Dr. Arthur McDonald, criminologist attached to the United States bureau of education at Washington. Dr. McDonald argues that automobiles, electric cars and telephones and other inventions are responsible for the increase in crime, suicide and various forms of abnormality, because they cause people to exercise less and to think more. This, he says, puts an unusual strain on the nervous system as compared with the muscular system.

The "Aye" Had It.

Senator McCombs was pressing an amendment to a pending bill when there were about half a score other members on the floor. It came to a vote at length and only Mr. McCombs responded to the call for ayes. No one voted "no" and President Pro Tem. Frye gravely proclaimed: "The aye has it."

Letter to Blodgett Milling Co.,

Janesville, Wis.
Gentlemen: You understand grinding wheat, buckwheat, rye, oats and corn. We understand grinding paint-things. The two sorts of grinding are not much alike. Very likely oats and wheat behave very differently in the mill, and you manage them differently—we know very little about your work; don't need to; we'd rather depend on you.

But we paint your house and mill and outbuildings; perhaps you'd be glad to know about grinding paints, for some people mix their paint with a stick in a tub.

We use lead and zinc. And our zinc is as tough as your oats. Tub mixers imagine they mix it. They don't. They can't. Takes grinding to mix lead and zinc.

They are both white. Tub mixers don't know it, but the tub mixed lead and zinc is a streak of one alongside of a streak of the other.

We grind as you grind; and our paint is lead and zinc ground together, mixed intimately; it is neither lead nor zinc, but lead and zinc; the lead is lost and the zinc is lost; each lost in the other, both lost in the mixture, lead chalks and zinc peels; lead and zinc ground together, hang on and protect each other.

We take care of your mill outside; you take of it inside.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVOE & CO.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Cooler tonight, with rain threatened tomorrow.

WITH FIFE AND DRUM
To the sweep of martial music
Comes the line advancing
But the heads are bowed and silvered.

And but feeble are the feet—
Feet that marched to battle music
In the days of long ago;
Heads so proudly held, and brave-ly.

E'er time silvered them with snow,
Brave old hearts now beating sadly
Slow feet faltering as they go.
Gray heads bowed with sweet, sad memories.

Of the days of long ago;
Of the comrades who went with them.
Where the music led the way;
Bittersweet to every veteran.
Are the memories of this day.

Brave old men, we bow before them.
Marching to the city white,
With their flowers and their garlands;
Surely, 'tis a gracious sight.
Proud are we that we know them.
E'er the last old veteran true,
Steps his last to martial music,
Goes to join his last review.

This choice sentiment, so appropriate to Memorial day, was written by Candice A. Bramble, and recently published in Will Carlton's magazine "Every Where". It portrays vividly the little group of old veterans who have gathered today all over the land, to pay a tribute of loving remembrance to the comrades of forty years ago.

It is difficult for the present generation to fully appreciate all that this remnant of the greatest army that ever engaged in conflict, means. The men and women of fifty, who were children during the dark days of strife, do not always realize the full significance, unless the brother, or left in the home a representative who came back with shattered health, on account of exposure, or scars of battle.

The nation is sometimes more thoughtful than the individual, as is evidenced by the national homes scattered over the country, and accessible to every old veteran who finds himself in need.

Memorial day has come to be a holiday and its observance is not always sacred. While it is natural and right to bury sorrow, and cover up the scars of the past, it is well to remember that Memorial day is fraught with deep significance, and the events it commemorates, have no parallel in history.

The men of '61 and '65, represent all that is left of an army 2,000,000 strong. The most gallant, as well as the most intelligent body of men that ever marched to the strains of martial music. They were volunteers, enlisted in a righteous cause, and they came from homes of every class, inspired by one common sentiment, love of country and loyal patriotism.

Every hamlet and village responded to the call, and almost every home contributed. It was not a war of conquest, neither was it a conflict inspired by hatred. While slavery was the primary cause, vastly more than the freedom of a race was involved.

When the first gun was fired on Sumpter, the watchword rang out: "The Union must and shall be preserved." And the great heart of the north responded as the heart of one man. It was mutiny on a larger scale than the world had ever known and when after four years of family warfare, peace was restored, without the loss of a star from the nation's emblem, the victory secured was worth all it cost in life and treasure.

The country was full of heroes in those days. Many of them never lived to share in the glory of a land redeemed and when the last roll call mustered out the regiments, the ranks were sorely depleted, and in many cases only a fragment responded.

This was nearly a little band of old men, here and there are left, but memorial day means as much to this little handful of men in 1903 as it ever did.

There are some experiences that come to life, that make a lasting impression, and these years of service in the field are one of them. Common hardship and common danger make all men akin, and the title "comrade" is more significant than the title, brother.

the campfire and the reunion call back vividly the scenes of other days, and every year the shattered ranks are being depleted, while no civilian can fill the vacancy. There is something pathetic about a reunion especially if it be a regiment or a brigade. Have you ever listened to the stories and looked into the faces of the old men as they sat around the camp fire and called back the memories of other years. Youth is renewed and the eye sparkles with new lustre.

Not long ago an old soldier weak and emaciated from long suffering, was given up to die. For weeks he had been unable to retain food. The old machine was worn out, and he was patiently waiting to be released. He had been the captain of a company in a regiment that had seen hard service, and when he was told that the old sixteenth had gone into camp nearby for a couple of weeks, he said, "I am going out to see the boys."

His daughter protested that the exertion would kill him, but to no purpose and so he was placed in an ambulance and carried to the camp ground.

Old comrades surrounded him, and with loving hands, they laid him on a cot nearby, where the dinner was being prepared. In a moment he said, "Them beans smell like the regular old fashioned army beans, I believe I'll try a dish." "But father," the daughter said, "you can't eat any beans, you know you haven't taken anything stronger than milk for a month." "But Corporal Smith will obey my orders," he replied, "Corporal, a dish of beans."

The order was obeyed, and soon the invalid was bolstered up enjoying the first meal that he had been able to take for many a day. "Now a cup of good army coffee," was the next order, and the daughter looked on in astonishment.

When it was time to go home, he said, "My daughter, I'm going to stay all night with the boys," and stay he did. When the camp broke up, two weeks later, he was able to march home, the camp fire and the reunion was a health resorer.

The Grand Army and Memorial day may not mean very much to the boys and girls of the new century but it means a great deal to the little remnant of men who remain.

The history of the war of the rebellion reads like a romance, but it was intensely real. The impress made upon the hearts and lives of the men who participated, is a lasting impress.

The little army is travelling rapidly down the slope. The advance is so rapid that every now and then a comrade drops out by the way. The vacancy always remains vacant, and another mound in the churchyard, marks the resting place.

Not very far in the distance the Grand Army will be of the past, and memory and history will be the only reminder of the greatest tragedy ever experienced by any nation.

The heritage bequeathed to the land as the result of this tragedy, is of priceless value. It should inspire in the hearts of the boys and girls of today, not only a love of country, but love and the highest regard for the veterans living, and a tender regard for the memory of the veterans dead.

The boys of '61 who went out in the full vigor of young manhood, have many of them passed in final review. The fragment that remain have passed the age limit. Their few remaining years should be crowned with blessing. All honor to the boys of '61."

Street repairs and washouts, due to recent rains are necessary to public safety. If damage suits result, it matters not whether there is money in the treasury or not. There should be no east iron rules, concerning this class of work. A family may be practicing economy, but if death comes along, the funeral becomes a necessity. It pays to be conservative, but not prudish.

The president's speech at Butte, Montana, is being criticised without occasion in some circles. It was a fair statement of a very practical question, that neither the greed of capital, nor prejudice of labor should be permitted to control. In the light of developments, it is not difficult to discover that a labor trust is the most dangerous combination that confronts the nation today, in the way of monopoly.

Idaho now has two presidential towns. One was planted by President Harrison, in 1891. The other by President Roosevelt, a few days ago.

The Presbyterian church is to be congratulated on the advance movement made at the General Assembly now in session at Los Angeles. The old doctrine of predestinations, and foreordination, does not belong to tury, and infant damnation was too repulsive to be tolerated. There are some moss grown features connected with other church creeds, that are a handicap to success, and should be eliminated.

The conjunction of several planets is said to be responsible for the violent storms that are now raging in various parts of the country.

One of the mistakes in the last state campaign, was, that it commenced at least six months too soon. The people like a little politics now and then for recreation, but for a steady diet, it soon becomes monotonous. A short, sharp campaign is more effective.

PRESS COMMENT

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: As a matter of fact, the objection raised to the prison contract system by organized labor of all kinds is greater than the supply. On this account, the prison contractors will do free labor practically no harm, as every person who cares to work in this country today is able to secure employment at fair wages.

Sturgeon Bay Advocate: It will be a pretty difficult matter for the friends of the present administration to explain when the time comes how it happens that Gov. La Follette desires all class of property to stand its full bare of the burden of taxation while the worthy owners of the shipping, escape almost scott free. That measure received the official endorsement of the executive two years ago, and the move to repeal was last week defeated in the assembly, which as everybody knows, was under his control.

Fond du Lac Reporter: Red tape is never attractive to a busy man. He does not care to go through the formula necessary to vote at a primary, and it apt to consider it time wasted. It is for this reason that a large percentage of Milwaukee voters refuse to attend the primaries. What is true of Milwaukee will prove true of any other community. As a hobby and a reform issue primary election has been attractive, but as a practical remedy for alleged evils of the present caucus law it is a failure. In token thereof let it be remembered that the famous "Doc" Ames, recently convicted of hoodluming was elected mayor of Minneapolis, under a primary law.

Neenah Times: The Times notices that the half breed newspapers, especially those who owe allegiance to Gov. La Follette for "favors received and expected" are busy now in recruiting Bob for the third term. All of which on the part of H. B. Peppers goes to remind one of a bull trying to butt a railway engine off the track and when the engineer pulled the throttle valve wide open, and casually remarked, "I admire your pluck, old fellow, but I—n your judgment." Bob will hear something drop in 1904 or the Times fails to read aright the signs of the times.

THIS AFTERNOON WILL BE BUSY

PROGRAM AS PLANNED BY COMMITTEE IN CHARGE.

SPEAKING TO BE IN THE PARK

The Procession Will March Through the Streets at Two O'clock.

At two o'clock promptly this afternoon the Memorial day parade of nine hundred and three will start on its march, to the stirring music of the drum corps. As Memorial day comes around each year, we never tire of the soul-stirring services that keep alive the memory of our soldiers who have left us, our hearts beat the faster when the music of the fife and drum is in the air and our flag floats in the breeze. The line of march today will be down Milwaukee, from High street, then down South Main street to the park.

Any societies who have not been given a place in the parade, will form on South High street near Milwaukee and they will be given a position before the parade starts. Carriages will also form here and fall in the rear of the last division. The order of the parade is as previously given. First the Fire Police, then the marshal of the day, Adjutant Child, following will be the Christ Church Cadet company, the G. A. R. drum corps, members of the W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, Spanish war veterans, and the Sons of Veterans, who will be succeeded by the disabled veterans in carriages, following them in carriages will be the Woman's Relief corps. Those who are to take part in the exercises in the courthouse park are next in line, in the first carriage will be Mayor A. O. Wilson, Reverend Richard Vaughn, the Reverend Wm. W. Warner and Miss Harriet Decker. In the second carriage will be the Y. M. C. A. quartette, Mr. Kline, Dr. Richards, F. E. Williams, F. M. Taylor.

Courthouse Park
At the courthouse park the exercises will begin at two-thirty o'clock. Mayor Wilson, president of the day, will make the opening remarks. After music by the drum corps, the quartette will sing. Rev. W. W. Warner will invoke the blessing. E. O. Kimberley will sing "As the Years Roll By." Miss Harriet Decker will then recite "The Old Drum Corps," after which the Y. M. C. A. quartette will sing "The Call of the Roll on High." The address of the day is to be delivered by Reverend R. M. Vaughn, after which the G. A. R. drum corps will play "American," led by Mr. Kimberley, will close the exercises.

Cadet Company.
The Cadet company that takes part is the only military company organized in Janesville at the present time. Its captain is a well known Janesville man, B. M. Palmer. Mr. Palmer is a university man, and was colonel of the university regiment in his senior year. His lieutenants in the cadet company here are: 1st Lieut. R. H. Griffiths and 2nd Lieut. Fred Hutchinson. The non-commissioned officers are: Quartermaster Sergeant C. S. Carpenter, 1st Sergt. L. Gage, Sergeants L. Townsend, F. H. Korst and Harvey Lee, Corporals Olson, Ehrhinger, Hollins and Smith. The company now has a roll call of 35 men.

WOMEN'S CLUBS TO SAVE MOUNDS

Will Try to Create Sentiment in Favor of Preserving Them for Posterity.

If the women's clubs of the state are able to do so, there will be no more desecration of Indian mounds, within the limits of the state, nor will even the high and mighty powers that control the state fair ground be allowed to dig and level down the mounds within their precincts. This was the decision reached at the convention of women's clubs held at Lake Mills, this past week.

Ladies in Earnest
The ladies are in earnest about their work and a committee was appointed to excite interest in every section of the state. There is no state that has the numerous relics of the past inhabitants of this beautiful country, as has Wisconsin, and the action of the ladies, in trying to preserve them should meet with aid and co-operation.

Make Plea for Mounds
The Indian mounds require immediate attention. No place on earth is there so many effigies as in Wisconsin. Every child who has begun the study of American history has read of the famous serpent in Adams county O., and the wonderful elephant effigy near the mouth of the Wisconsin river. The former has been preserved and the grounds laid out in a public park. The latter is well cultivated by plow and scraper, even though its height is inconvenient for utilitarian purposes.

Lake Regions
The lake regions of Wisconsin abound in the effigy mounds, which are made of earth and prove as enduring as stone. At the present rate of destruction it will not be long before they will all be beyond recovery. In view of the rich heritage, historically and naturally, which is ours, as men and women of Wisconsin, can we allow these bequests to go to destruction? The Indian mounds require immediate attention.

Begin Work at Fort Atkinson
An effort toward the preservation of the ancient earthworks has been started at Fort Atkinson, where the local chapter of the D. A. R. is making an effort to purchase the tract of land where a lizard effigy is located and turn it into a public park.

Inspect Plant: L. C. Cole, of Tont Post Co., are here inspecting the plant.

FLAG DAY WAS DULY OBSERVED

The Eastern Star Study Class Held a Most Interesting Meeting.

It was "Flag Day" with members of the O. E. Star Study class, May 28th, held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Merritt, entertained by the president. The house was elaborately and profusely decorated with "Old Glory." Through the kindness of Mrs. Robert C. Denison the large flags belonging to the Congregational church were used in draping the large arches, while at another two smaller ones were used effectively, and numerous silk flags were in evidence. This being the last session of the season much business was transacted. The election of officers resulted in the re-election of all but Secretary Mrs. Garbutt, retiring. President, Mrs. E. O. Kimberley; vice-pres., Mrs. C. V. Kerch; secretary, Miss Fannie Rumlill; treasurer, Mrs. H. L. McNamara.

Mrs. Mary Harrington of Racine was a welcome guest of the class and will remain a few days with friends. Program—"The Star Spangled Banner," solo, Miss Winkler; The American Flag and Its Origin, Mrs. Kimberley; "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," class; Francis Scott Key—Mrs. Kerch; Old South Church and Faneuil Hall, Mrs. Sanborn. The social hour followed when ice cream and cake were served by the Misses May Merritt and Belle Strawser.

Team from Janesville is at the Capital City to Win Glory.

This afternoon, high schools all over the state are competing for the prizes at Madison. It is the day of the great interscholastic meet and the heart of every high school student is turned towards the capital city, if he cannot be there in person. It is not probable that Janesville will be given one of the three coveted places but the little team of eight men who went to Madison this morning will do their best to let the state at large know that Janesville has athletes of some note. Harold Myers is the most promising of all the candidates and he should win a place even among the fast sprinters from Milwaukee. The boys who will wear the purple and white this afternoon at Camp Randall are the following: Myers, Kent, Waters, Carle, Fredendall, Davis, Caldwell, Wright, Coach Norris accompanied them.

STRANGE FACT IS BROUGHT OUT

COUNTY HAS NO OFFICIALLY CORRECT WEIGHTS OR MEASURES.

WILL BE REMINDED SOON

End of Work of the Session of the Board of Supervisors Came Yesterday.

No official weights and measures exist in the county at the present time. In the office of the county treasurer there is a complete set, which is well adapted to all needs, but they have not for several years been certified to as correct accounting to the official weights and measures of the state. Although county treasurer Rice has made repeated efforts to have this lack remedied, he has been unsuccessful. At some time in July or August it will probably be possible to make use of an appropriation passed at the last session of the legislature and have the county weights and measures sealed.

Was Disclosed

This state of affairs was disclosed at the meeting of the county board yesterday afternoon. It was brought about by a communication from City Attorney Burpee calling attention to the fact that the weights and measures were not in such a condition that it would be possible to seal the city weights and measures as required by law. His statement of the status of Rock County's weights and measures was followed by a resolution which was passed directing the county treasurer to have them tried, proved, sealed and certified.

Explains Position

While the matter was under discussion County Treasurer Rice explained that he had repeatedly written to Madison regarding the matter but he had never been advised that it would be impossible to have the weights sealed for nearly two months and that in the meantime, it would be best to avoid any difficulty as there was no remedy for the situation.

Make Appropriations

At the afternoon session, $175 was appropriated for payment for the circuit court bookkeeping typewriter, and a similar sum to purchase such a typewriter for the Register of Deeds office, in accordance with the report of a special committee advocating such a course as an economy of both time and books.

A resolution to enclose the county cemetery at Johnston with a fence was adopted.

On report of a committee to investigate the matter it was voted to return $8.82 which Lawrence university at Appleton had paid as taxes on property at Johnston. By its charter, the property of the university is non-taxable.

Not to exceed fifty per cent of the bills on file was voted to be paid the Supervisor of Assessors in return for his services.

Court Room

In regard to the rental of the municipal court room it was decided to enter into an agreement with the city to pay two-thirds of the rental of the municipal court room if the city would sign the lease which Judge Fifield presented some time ago. It was voted to pay two thirds of the amount which has been expended in furnishing the court room—$257.22.

"But that ain't what I started in to tell. As I was a-sayin', old Jane Hardway thought she'd sorter put a word in the dispute to pay for her board an' keep, an' she told Hetty that it was all owing to the way the Bishops was raised that Alf couldn't stand to have things nice about 'im. She said all the Bishops she'd ever known had a natural stoop that they got by livin' in cabins with low roofs. She wasn't spreadin' 'er butter as thick as she thought she was—'er maybe it was the sort she was spreadin'—fer Uetsy blazed up like the woods afore in a high wind. It didn't take old Jane long to diskliver that there was several breeds o' Bishops out o' jail, an' she spent most o' the rest o' her visit braggin' on some she'd read about. She said the name sounded like the start o' 'em had been religious and substantial."

"Brother Abner," whined Mrs. Bishop, "I wisht you'd hush all that foolishness an' help me 'n the children out o' this awful fix. Alfred always would listen to you."

"Well," and the old man smiled and winked at the lawyer, "I'll give you both all the advice I kin. Now, the Shoal River stock is a good thing right now, but of the mill was to catch on fire an' burn down that'd be a loss. Then as fer timber land, it ain't easy to sell, but it might take a start before another flood. I say it might, an' then agin it mightn't. The mill might burn, an' then agin it mightn't. Now, of you uns kin be helped by this advice you are welcome to it free o' charge. Not changin' the subject, did you uns know Mrs. Richardson's heffer's got a calf? I reckon she won't borrow so much milk after hers gits good."

Trabue smiled broadly as the gaunt man withdrew, but his amusement was short lived, for Mrs. Bishop began to cry, and she soon rose in despair and left the room. Alan stood for a moment looking at the unmoved face of his father, who had found something in the last clause of the document which needed explanation; then he, too, went out.

CHAPTER II.

ALAN found his uncle on the back porch washing his face and hands in a basin on the water shelf. The young man leaned against one of the wooden posts which supported the low roof of the porch and waited for him to conclude the pulling, spluttering operation, which he finally did by enveloping his head in a long towel hanging from a wooden roller on the weatherboarding.

"Well," he laughed, "yore uncle Ab didn't better matters in that overly much, but what could a feller do? Yore pa's as bullheaded as a young steer, an' he's already played smash anyway. Yore ma's wastin' breath; but a woman seems to have plenty of it to spare. A woman's tongue's like a windmill—it takes breath to keep it a-go'in', an' a dead clam 'ud kill her business."

"It's no laughing matter, Uncle Ab," said Alan despondently. "Something must have gone wrong with father's judgment. He never has acted this way before."

The old man dropped the towel and thrust his long, almost jointless fingers into his vest pocket for a horn comb which folded up like a jackknife. "I was jest a-wonderin'," as he began to rake his shaggy hair straight down to his eyes—"I was jest a-wonderin' if he could 'a' bent his skull in a little that time his mule throwed 'im ag'in the sweet gum. They say that once changes a body powerful. Folks do

"It's no laughing matter, Uncle Ab," think he's off his cap on the land question, an' now that he's traded his best nest egg for another swine o' the earth's surface I reckon they'll talk harder. But yore pa ain't no fool. No plumb idiot could 'a' managed yore ma as well as he has. You see, I know what he's accomplished, fer I've been with 'im ever since they was yoked together. When they was married, she was as wild as a buck an' certainly made out money with a crack line, but Alfred has tapered 'er down beautiful. She didn't want this thing done one bit, an' yet it is settled by this time"—the old man looked through the hall to the front gate—"yes, Trabue's unwhitelin'. He's got them stock certificates in his pocket, an' yore pa has the deeds in his note case. When this gets out, mossbacks from heer clean to Gilmer 'll be trappin' in to dispose o' land at so much a front foot."

"But what under high heaven will he do with it all?"

"Hold on to it," grinned Abner; "that is, ef he kin rake an' scrape enough together to pay the taxes. Why, last year his taxes mighty nigh floored 'im, an' the expenses on this county he's jest annexed will push 'im like rips, fer now, you know, he'll have to do without the income on his factory stock. But he thinks he's got the right sow by the year. Before long he may yell out to us to come help 'im turn 'er loose, but he's waitin' with 'er now."

At this juncture Mrs. Bishop came out of the dining room wiping her eyes on her apron.

"Mother," said Alan tenderly, "try not to worry over this any more than you can help."

"Yore pa's gettin' old an' childish," whimpered Mrs. Bishop. "He's heard somebody say timber land up in the mountains will some day advance, an' he forgets that he's too old to get the benefit of it. He's goin' to bankrupt us."

"Ef I do," the man accused thundered from the hall as he strode out. "It'll be my money that's lost—money that I made by hard work."

He stood before them, glaring over his eyeglasses at his wife. "I've had enough of yore tongue, my lady. Ef I'd not had so much to think about in that jest now, I'd 'a' shut you up sooner. Dry up now—not another word. I'm doin' the best I kin accordin' to my lights to provide fer my children, an' I won't be interfered with."

No one spoke for a moment. However, Mrs. Bishop finally retorted, as her brother knew she would in her own time.

"I don't call buyin' thousands o' acres o' unsalable land providin' fer anything except the porchouse," she fumed.

"That's been'se you don't happen to know as much about the business as I do," said Bishop, with a satisfied chuckle, which to the observing Daniel sounded very much like exultation. "When you all know what I know, you'll be laughin' on 'other sides o' yore mouths. I reckon I'll jest have to let you all know about this or I won't have a speck o' peace from now on. I didn't tell you at first bec'ase nobody kin keep a secret as well as the man it belongs to, an' I was afeared it 'ud leak out an' damage my interests, but this last 5,000 acres jest about sweeps all the best timber in the whole Cohutta section, an' I nought as well let up. I reckon you all know that ef—I say ef—my land was nigh a railroad it 'ud be low at five times what I paid fer it, don't you? Well, then, the long an' short o' it is that I happen to be on the inside an' know that a railroad is goin' to be run from Blue Lick Junction to Darley. It'll be started inside of the next year an' 'll run smack dab through my property. That now! You know more'n you thought you did, don't you?"

The little group stared into his glowing face incredulously.

"A railroad is to be built, father?" exclaimed Alan.

"That's what I said."

Mrs. Bishop's eyes flashed with sudden hope, and then, as if remembering her husband's limitations, her face fell.

"Alfred," she asked skeptically, "how does it happen that you know about the railroad before other folks do?"

"How do I? That's it now—how do I?" and the old man laughed freely.

"I've had my fun out o' this thing, listen! to what every crank said about me bein' cracked an' so on, but I was jest a-lyin' low waitin' fer my time."

"Well, I'll be switched!" ejaculated Abner Daniel, half seriously, half sarcastically. "Geewhilkins! A railroad! I've always said one would pay like rips an' open up a dern good, God-forsaken country. I'm glad you are a-goin' to start one, Alfred."

Alan's face was filled with an expression of blended doubt and pity for his father's credulity. "Father," he said gently, "are you sure you got your information straight?"

"I got it from headquarters." The old man raised himself on his toes and knocked his heels together, a habit he had not indulged in for many a year.

"It was told to me confidentially by a man who knows all about the whole thing, a man who is in the employ o' the company that's goin' to build it."

"Hu!" The exclamation was Abner Daniel's. "Do you mean that Atlanta lawyer, Perkins?"

Bishop stared, his mouth lost some of its pensive firmness, and he ceased the motion of his feet.

"What made you mention his name?" he asked curiously.

"Oh, I dunno. Somehow I jest thought o' him. He looks to me like he might be buildin' a railroad ur two."

"Well, that's the man I mean," said Bishop, more unceasingly.

Somehow the others were all looking at Abner Daniel, who grunted suddenly and almost angrily.

"I wouldn't trust that skunk no fuder 'n I could find a bull by the tail."

"You say you wouldn't?" Bishop tried to smile, but the effort was a facial failure.

"I wouldn't trust 'im nuther, Brother Ab," chimed in Mrs. Bishop. "As soon as I laid eyes on 'im I knowed he wouldn't do. He's too mealy mouthed an' fawnin'." But he wouldn't melt in his mouth.

He bragged on ever'thing we had while he was heer. Now, Alfred, what we must git at is, what was his object in tellin' you that tale?"

He descended the steps and crossed the yard to the barn. They saw him lean over the rail fence for a moment as if in troubled thought.

"Poor father," said Alan to his uncle as his mother retired slowly into the house. "He seems troubled, and it may lost his temper in the face of the awful possibility that her words hinted at. "Are you all a pack an' puzzle o' fools? If you must dive an' probe, then I'll tell you he owns a slice o' timber land above Holley creek, I'm'n some o' mine, an' so he let me into the secret out o' pure good will. Oh, you all can't skeer me. I ain't one o' the skeerin' kind."

But, notwithstanding this outburst, it was plain that doubt had actually taken root in the ordinarily cautious mind of the crude speculator.

Abner Daniel laughed out harshly all at once and then was silent. "What's the matter?" asked his sister in despair.

"I was jest a-wonderin'," replied her brother.

"You are?" said Bishop angrily. "It seems to me you don't do much else."

"Folks 'at wonders a lot ain't so apt to believe ever'thing they heer," retorted Abner. "I was just a-wonderin' why that little, spindly shanked Peter Mosely has been holdin' his head so high the last week or so. I'll bet I could make a dern good guess now."

"What under the sun's Peter Mosely got to do with my business?" burst from Bishop's impatient lips.

"He's got a sorter roundabout connection with it, I reckon," smiled Abner grimly. "I happen to know that Abe Tompkins sold 'im 2,000 acres o' timber land on Huckleberry ridge jest after yore Atlanta man spent the day lookin' round in these parts."

Bishop was no fool, and he grasped Abner's meaning even before it was quite clear to the others.

"Looky heer," he said sharply, "what do you take me fer?"

"I ain't tuck you fer nothin'," said Abner, with a grin. "Leastwise, I ain't tuck you fer $5,000 worth o' cot ton mill stock. To make a long story short, the Atlanta Jack leg lawyer is skin to the Tompkins family some way. I'd bet a new hat to a ginger cake that Perkins never owned a spoonful o' land up heer an' that he's jest helpin' the Tompkins folks on the sly to unload some o' their land, so they kin move west, what they've always wanted to go. Peter Mosely is a man on the watch out for soft snaps, an' when Perkins whispered the big secret in his gear, like he did to you, he started out on a still hunt fer timbered land on the line of the proposed trunk line due west yuh Lick-skillet to Darley, with stop over privileges at Buzzard Roost an' fifteen minutes fer hush at Dog Trot Springs. Then, somehow or other, by hook or crook—mostly crook—Abe Tompkins wasn't doagin' anybody about that time. Peter Mosely could 'a' run agin 'im with his eyes shut on a dark night."

"I was at Nell Elmore's store when the two met, an' of a trade was ever made quicker betwixt two folks it was done by telegraph an' the paper was signed by lightning. Abe said he had the land an' wouldn't part with it at any price ef he hadn't been had in need o' money, fer he believed it was chuck full o' iron ore, soapstone, black marble an' water power, to say nothin' o' timber; but he'd been troubled so much about cash, he said, that he'd made up his mind to let 'er slide an' the devil take the contents. I never seed two parties to a deal better satisfied. They both left the store with a strut. Mosely's strut was the biggest, fer he wasn't afeard o' nothin'. Tompkins looked like he was afeard Mosely 'ud call 'im back an' want to rue."

"You mean to say?"—But old Bishop seemed unable to put his growing fear into words.

"Oh, I don't know nothin' fer certain," said Abner Daniel sympathetically. "But ef I was you I'd go down to Atlanta an' see Perkins. You kin tell by the way he acts whether there's anything in his railroad story or not. But, by gum, you ort to know whar you stand. You've loaded yore-self from hind to fore quarters, an' ef you don't plant yore feet on some'n you'll go down."

Bishop clutched this proposition as a drowning man would a straw. "Well, I will go see 'im," he said. "I'll go jest to satisfy you. As fer as I'm concerned I know he wasn't tellin' me no lie, but I reckon you all never 'll rest till you are satisfied."

He descended the steps and crossed the yard to the barn. They saw him lean over the rail fence for a moment as if in troubled thought.

"Poor father," said Alan to his uncle as his mother retired slowly into the house. "He seems troubled, and it may

Happy Homes

One of the essentials of the happy homes of to-day is a fund of information as to right living and the best methods of promoting health and happiness. With proper knowledge, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and are of not less value than the using of the most wholesome foods and the selecting of the best medicinal agents when needed. With the well-informed, medicinal agents are used only when nature needs assistance and while the importance of cleansing the system effectually, when bilious or constipated, has long been known, yet until within recent years it was necessary to resort to oils, salts, extracts of roots, barks and other cathartics which were found to be objectionable and to call for constantly increased quantities.

That physicians having learned that the most excellent laxative and purgative principles were to be found in certain plants, principally in the leaves, the California Fig Syrup Co. discovered a method of obtaining such principles in their purest condition and of presenting them with pleasant and refreshing liquids in the form most acceptable to the system and the remedy became known as—Syrup of Figs—as figs were used, with the plants, in making it, because of their agreeable taste.

This excellent remedy is now rapidly coming into universal use as the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually without disturbing the natural functions and without unpleasant after effects and its use may be discontinued when it is no longer required.

All who would enjoy good health and its blessings should remember that it is the one remedy which physicians and parents well-informed approve and recommend and use and which they and their little ones alike enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all reliable druggists, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, in original packages only, having the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs—and the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

PEOPLE'S DRUG COMPANY AND

A STRANGE CASE.

BY MRS. M. L. RAYNE.

Two young men were strolling along the leading thoroughfare of a large town, amicably discussing various topics and making comments on the events of the day. They were mere lads as far as years went, but they carried themselves like athletes and kept step with military exactness.

They were clerks, one in a hardware business, the other in a bank. Clerks on a small salary, filling unimportant positions, but on the road to success, for already both of the young fellows had made good records and were named for early advancement. They lived at their respective homes, had no bad habits, and even had saved a trifle from their small earnings. Allan Richards was the elder of the two by a year, but Owen Morgan was mature enough to be his friend's match, the difference in their appearance being that between blonde and dark.

The state in which their town is located does not believe in capital punishment, hence a long list of criminals and doers of desperate deeds who do not fear a term in prison which may be shortened at the option of a new governor. So there are carnivals of crime just as there are epidemics of disease, and they make work for a great array of legal talent with its grades and supernumeraries. One winter will be comparatively quiet, to be followed by a summer season of atrocious murders. The next winter the criminal had will be hold-ups, a series of "your money or your life" dramas. The local press will give dramatic recitals of robbers in masks who reap golden harvests, and the splendidly appointed police force read it over their breakfasts — and nobody is apprehended. The lawyers, however, give advice to the victims and get what little money they have left.

This particular winter the hold-up man was something out of the common. He gave back the purse of a poor washerwoman and even added a new "five" to it after hearing her tale of woe. He frequently returned an heirloom watch or some souvenir begged for as a gift of a dead friend. He was ubiquitous, being seen on the Campus Martius and the Grand Circus at the same time, conducting two different robberies. Finally it dawned on the local comprehension that two hold-up men were operating among the citizens, but the knowledge did not lead to any arrest. They were written of as if they were magnanimous heroes, their gentlemanly rebates exploited as generous concessions, but they escaped detection and arrest as completely as if they had been myths. It was left to the quick intuition and acute hearing of one victim to locate the criminals.

Allan Richards was an employee of the Mercantile bank. One morning he was summoned to the office of the president of the bank. A blue-coated policeman was in attendance and the youth recognized him with a pleasant nod, for he knew him by sight.

"Allan," said the president, curtly, "where do you spend your evenings?"

Not a tremor was in the lad's voice, nor a tint of added color in his face as he answered, respectfully:

"At home, sir, or with friends—sometimes at the public library reading to improve my mind. Why, sir?"

"I believe you, Allan," said the president, kindly, "but you will be compelled to prove it—do your duty, policeman."

"What is the charge against me? I insist upon knowing." As Allan faced the officer his lip quivered and his cheek whitened, but his manly bearing and honest eyes looking straight into the eyes of his accusers made his own self-defense.

"You are charged with highway robbery—come on, young fellow. I guess we won't have to jux you. One story is good until another is told, and we haven't heard yours yet."

Allan went to the station, and after a short preliminary examination, during which he pre-empted a remarkable silence, he was "jugged" safely enough. A few hours later his chum, Owen Morgan, was taken to the same building and also placed in a cell. He was not told of his friend's arrest, nor was Allan informed of his presence. But the whole town was aroused by the "stupidity," as it was termed, of the police in making such a mistake. Bankers and merchants flocked to their telephones to offer bail, and the lifetime friends of the boys wept over their outrageous treatment and demanded their immediate liberty.

"Their whole regard gives the lie to the unjust accusation," said one of their defenders, but before the words died on the air the officers sent out to search for evidence had returned with the spoils and established evidence that was indisputable. Gold watches, money, diamonds and enough personal bric-a-brac to start a jewelry store had been found secreted in the trunks of the two young men. They seemed to have made no effort to dispose of any of their plunder, and it stood as the most unique crime of modern times. Crime nevertheless, and the end was not yet.

No one—except the victims of the numerous robberies—rejoiced over the apprehension of the criminals. The whole town seemed dazed over the denouement. The boys had not spent any of the money nor benefited in any way by their unlawful accession of wealth. Neither of them would talk, so it was not known what motive could have actuated them. At noon on the day of their arrest the father of Allan Richards was informed of his son's dishonor. Allan was his only child, and he had brought him up in the fear of the Lord. He went home and found his wife unconvinced of the boy's guilt. Then he went to the station and saw Allan in a cell. What was said was only known between the two, but on his way home the father called at a drug store and bought something in a phial, and in a few hours Allan was fatherless. When they told him he fainted, and remained so long unconscious that his friend Owen was taken from his own cell and brought down to help restore him. Then the unfortunate boy broke the silence they had both so persistently maintained.

"Oh," he said, wringing his hands, "we never thought of this! We began it as a lark, and the first man we spoke to could have knocked us down with his little finger, but he gave up his valuables and ran away. We never from first to last carried a revolver. We never were bad boys before. I don't know why we did it. There was no reason."

The outcome is not yet. The law has taken care of the offenders, but here are the strange complications of a crime without motive. There had been no consorting with criminals, no bad instincts, no reading of sensational literature. Healthy minds in healthy bodies, they were both satisfied with their positions in life. They neither drank nor gambled and had not one doubtful associate. All this was proved at their trial.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Another Telephone Episode

The young man with the malicious gleam in his eye, who had dropped a dime in the slot of the public telephone and obtained the desired connections, inquired in a falsetto voice: "Hello! Is this Miss Snubben?" "Yes," said the voice at the other end of the wire. "Who is this?" "Beg pardon. I can't quite understand you."

"This is Miss Snubben. What do you—"

"Beg pardon. Speak a little more plainly, please. Is this Miss Snubben?"

"It is. Who are—"

"Beg pardon again. I can't quite catch your answer."

"I say this is Miss Snubben. Who—"

"I am very sorry, but I never can understand anybody who is chewing gum and using a telephone. You are chewing gum, are you not?"

"Yes."

"Please take it out of your mouth."

"Have you taken it out?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's all."

Whereat he hung the receiver on the hook again, and went on with a satisfied grin on his face.—Chicago Tribune.

Our Country's Flag

Run up the flag on high!
Its stars shall light the sky!
Beneath it stand!
Let all its folds of light
Proclaim from morn till night
This is the Flag of Right
And fatherland.

From shore to mountain crag
Let all salute the flag
That makes men free.
Oh, may it ever wave
Above the true and brave,
A land without a slave
From sea to sea.

Our country, ever one
As long as shines the sun,
One flag we love:
A flag the furnace tried,
A flag for which men died,
The Stars and Stripes our pride!
Praise God above!
The Rev. Edward A. Rand in Zion's Herald.
